The roofing insurance claim process can be frustrating at times. Especially for those who have never had to deal with roof replacement insurance claims in the past. The problem is that each insurance company has its unique process of requirements for making a roof replacement insurance claim. The better you understand the process of submitting insurance claims for roof damage, the greater your odds of having your claim approved on time.

Inspect Your Roof for Damage before Filing Roofing Insurance Claims for Storm Damage

The best way to avoid unnecessary delays or damage progression is to inspect your roof for signs of damage immediately after major storms. This means you are less likely to be stricken with surprise damage months after the precipitating storm. Types of damage you're looking for include:

Beyond the damage to your roof, you will sometimes notice signs of water damage inside your home on ceilings or along the walls. These signs are big indications that something is wrong with your roof and further examination or a roofing inspection is warranted.

How to Get Insurance to Pay for Roof Replacement Services

Whether you're filing roof insurance claims for storm damage from driving rain, hail, and lightning or your roof damage insurance claim wind damage is the driving force behind the need for repairs, making your request early allows inspectors to check out the damage and make necessary repairs before further damage occurs. This also allows inspections to happen while the damage is fresh and can clearly be viewed as the result of storms or other covered events.

One of the first things you need to do, after verifying signs of problems, like those listed above, is to bring in a roofing contractor or service provider to inspect your roof thoroughly so he or she can ascertain the full scope of damage to your roof and your home.
