Signs you may need Roof Replacement

As a professional roofing company, Vertex Roofing will inspect your roof for signs of wear and tear or damage.

Here are some common problems that Vertex professional roofing contractors may find that can help property owners determine what steps to take — roof repairs or a new roof replacement. And we can help you understand what is covered under your home's property insurance or within your existing roofing warranty:

- A roof over 15 years old - an asphalt roof has a life expectancy of about 20 years, but it depends on others factors such as regular roof maintenance and weather damage from direct sunlight, ice damage, heavy winds, and torrential rainfall.
- Shingles that are missing or curled - shingle damage is a good sign of roof decay and when any shingles are missing or damaged, this provides a path for water to infiltrate the roofing system.
- Rusted or discolored metal roof - can be a sign of corrosion when the finish starts to wear away from the panels. Also, the metal fasteners may be starting to corrode and loosen which can introduce gouges and leaks into the roof.
- Stains on interior ceiling or walls - can be a sure sign that water is flowing into the property from gaps or damage in the roofing system. If you have soggy insulation in the attic of your home or can smell dampness in the upper rooms, then you may have a leak in your roof.
- Flat roof failure - are common if you notice ponding water or a spongy area when walking on your flat roof. These could be signs of inadequate or obstructed drainage.
