Choose Vertex for Your Salt Lake City, Utah Roofing Contractor Needs

When considering the best ways to protect an investment in a building, whether that's residential or commercial roofing, look up. The roof overhead provides protection from wind and weather, plus keeps the building cool in the summer, and warm in the winter. It provides an attractive finishing touch that coordinates beautifully with the rest of the building.

Because of these essential functions, a quality roof plays a substantial role in protecting the owner's investment in a home or commercial building. As the time comes to complete roof work, it's essential to select a reputable, honest roofing company that offers the best in services and workmanship.

Vertex Roofing has performed high-quality residential roofing, commercial roof maintenance, repairs, roof inspections, and roof replacements for more than 20 years in Utah.

ROOFING CONTRACTOR UTAH - RED FLAGS TO WATCH OUT FOR

When selecting a roofing company, it's essential to know what makes a company excellent. It's equally important to recognize problematic companies and the challenging issues that may occur when working with them. Here are a few of these issues:

1. Questionable deductible advice: Some roofing companies tell customers that they can repair a roof without customers having to pay their insurance deductibles. However, what these roofing companies are advocating is insurance fraud. If roofing companies say such things, customers are wise to rule them out as potential roofers.
2. Promises to handle claims: Roofing companies may promise that they can handle their customers' insurance claims. In many cases this is illegal. Needless to say, a customer does not want to get involved in a legal dispute so should avoid these types of roofing companies.
3. Inadequate licenses and/or insurance: A roofing company needs to have correct and adequate licenses and insurance for all their employees and contractors. Otherwise the customer is asking for trouble. Customers should ask to see proof of roofing companies' licensing and insurance credentials.
4. High-pressure sales tactics: Some roofing companies are so eager to secure jobs that they pressure potential customers into hiring them before all the details are in place, such as insurance company estimates.
5. Limited options in materials: Customers like to have choices when it comes to selecting colors and styles of material for roofing projects. However, some roofing companies don't provide many options.

If any of these issues becomes evident with a roofing company, it's best to say "no" and keep looking for a better choice.

Roofing Contractor FAQ

Whether you have leaks in your roof, or if you're trying to get ahead of leaks, there is a lot that you need to keep in mind when hiring a roofing contractor. There are some things that a homeowner can do to ensure they hire the right person for the job.

You will want to hire someone that is local. There are people who will travel through cities and get money upfront, do a small part of the job, then disappear. You want someone who has a local address, and someone who has references that you can check on who won't stop until the job is done right.

One of the more important things to check on is whether the roofer carries worker's compensation and liability insurance. Without it, you could be financially responsible if one of the roofers falls from the roof or from a ladder and gets hurt, and you may be paying for a new windshield out of your own pocket if a hammer slips out of a roofer's hand.

Don't choose the company based just on price. Talk to previous clients. Drive and look at projects they have going on to see how the work looks and to be sure they are treating their customer's property right. The cheapest price now could mean you will pay more in the future.
